

Lean Implementation for Managers

When businesses undertake a Lean programme, Senior and Middle Managers are frequently by-passed. Often, they are incorrectly assumed to have already gained an understanding of lean principles when, in fact, past training courses have included high levels of practical involvement which don't suit management roles and the typical demands on managers' time. Their role is coordination, not practical demonstration, and as such the Lean understanding they need should be focused differently.

Workshop Overview

This workshop is focused on providing a brief overview to the benefits of introducing Lean and helping to identify the benefits and opportunities for the organisation concerned.

The training is 'light touch' with plenty of interaction and visual representation of how Lean principles can transform a company's performance and affect its bottom line.

There is opportunity to chat informally with a highly-experienced team to identify how Lean could be introduced within your business, utilising government funding to support the initiative.
